What is Fashion

Fashion is something we deal with everyday. Even people who say they don't care what they wear choose clothes every morning that say a lot about them and how they feel that day.

One certain thing in the fashion world is change. We are constantly being bombarded with new fashion ideas from music, videos, books, and television. Movies also have a big impact on what people wear. Ray-Ban sold more sunglasses after the movie Men In Black. Sometimes a trend is world-wide. Back in the 1950s, teenagers everywhere dressed like Elvis Presley.

Who dictates fashion?

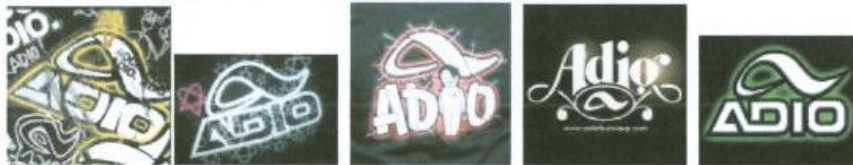

Musicians and other cultural icons have always influenced what we're wearing, but so have political figures and royalty. Newspapers and magazines report on what Hillary Clinton wears. The recent death of Diana, the Princess of Wales, was a severe blow to the high fashion world, where her clothes were daily news.

Adio footwear for skate

Adio footwear's history has been started in 1998, when Chris Miller (who owns Planet Earth Skateboards company, and before retiring was a professional skateboarder) think up this brand. The Adio footwear company is now pronounced „Audio“ (I don't know why, but it's thus), and they actually specialize on men's and women's shoes for skating, but the production of the other things is not stopped. The best known skateboarder who is sponzored by Adio footwear is Tony Hawk. He is the best skateboarder in the World. He was the first man in the world who completed a trick called „The 900“ - the skater make spin around 900°. Another skateboards sponzored by Adio are Bam Margera, Jeremy Wray, Ed Selego or Brian Sumner. They are not totally unknown.

Adio similarly to more brands (DCshoecousa, Volcom, Nike, Vans) was thinked up in the USA, but for example Dakine is from Hawaii (this company produces mostly briefcases, but it also produces winter caps and winter gloves). By the way, the word Dakine is garble from words The (Da) Kind (kine).

Footwear

Footwear consists of garments worn on the feet, for protection against the environment, and adornment. Socks and other hosiery are worn between the feet and the footwear, except for sandals and flip flops (thongs). Footwear is sometimes associated with fetishism, particularly in some recent fashions in shoes and boots.

People who practice the profession of shoemaking are shoemakers, cobblers or cordwainers.

The oldest known footwear was discovered in Fort Rock Cave in the U.S. state of Oregon; radiocarbon dating of these sandals woven from sagebrush bark indicates an age of least 10,000 years.

Jeans

Jeans are pants and trousers, made from material called denim. It was designed for work, but it became popular among teenagers in year 1950. Today, jeans are very popular in all ages and countries. It's many colors of jeans, but the most popular is blue. Jeans are most popular in the U.S.A. The most famous brands are Wrangler and Levi's.

First man who was selling modern jeans was German-Jewish merchant Levi Strauss. He was selling jeans into mining localities in California in 1850. One of his trade customers, Jacob Davis, with Levi Strauss got patent, for new using copper rivets at jeans. That was start of modern jeans.

In year 1850, jeans cost $1.50. Now, good jeans cost more than $80, and very quality and stylish jeans cost much more.

Long time was jeans part of work clothes, especially in second World War. In 1950s was blue jeans between teenagers and young adults become popular. But between older in was unacceptable. For examples some restaurants and theatres don't allow people wear blue jeans. It became better in 1960.

It is many fits of jeans, for example:

Carpenter jeans – many pockets

Low-rise jeans – sit low on hips

Capris – short trousers

Overall – protect working people

The Simpsons Fashion

As we all know, if you are a Simpson fan, there's no way to show it. It is very difficult to find any Simpsons clothing, and then you find it is sometimes VERY expensive, so I decided to give you a few tips where to find some. I'm a big Simpson fan, so I know what it feels like to not have anything that shows it.

Sometimes people wear Simpsons clothing without even knowing the characters' names, because the Simpsons are very nice to have on a t-shirt or whatever. Who wouldn't want to have 5 yellow people on their t-shirt?

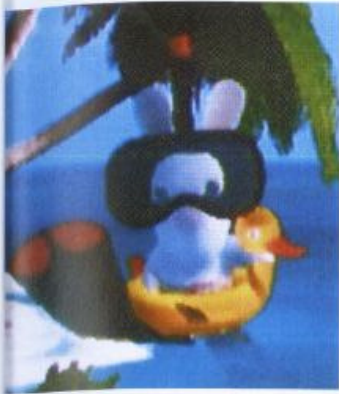

I know a perfect shop that every Simpson fan shouldn't miss. This amazing shop is in New York, you can get more informatik on:
www.simpshop.com

Simpsons clothes: Are you fat, and would you like to look like Homer Simpson? Sometimes being fat can be embarrassing, but if you look like a famous TV character, you can only be cool. In a shop called The Simpsons shop, you can buy a perfect Homer-set (blue trousers, white t-shirt, white pants) in size L-XXL for only $29.99, a Marge-set for ladies (green dress, red necklace, red shoes) in size S-L for $25.99, a Bart-set (orange t-shirt, blue shorts, red cap) in size 104-176 for $20.99, a Lisa-set for girls (red dress, white necklace, red shoes) for $21.99 and a Maggie-set for babies (blue sleepsuit, little blue bow, red dummy) in size newborn-4 years for $8.99.

In the same shop you can also get: 10 different Simpson t-shirts, Simpsons pyjamas for boys and girls, trousers, hats and socks. You can also get non-clothing items too: Lunchboxes, bags, pencilcases...

If you really truly are a Simpsons fan, you should go there right now, and spend, spend and spend.

Scuba Bunny: Alias "The Frog": A Rabbid wearing flippers, a snorkel mask, and occasionally, a ducky ring. They nearly always appear around a water source.

Do you know what rabbids wear? Have you ever seen a rabbid wearing a pirate costume? How are raving mad rabbids supposed to suit themselves with bizzare clothes of various types? The favourite rabbids are now coming directly from your games to the all new fashion show!

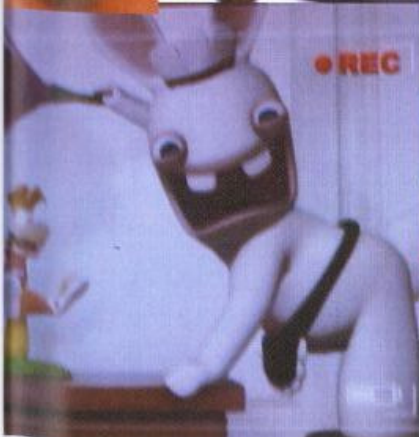

Tropical Bunny: A rabbid that wears a coconut ikini and a flower on its head and appears on beach.

Bunny Maid: Alias French Maid: A Rabbid wearing a small skirt and wielding a feather duster.

Gift Bunny: A Rabbid who runs around in a frenzied pattern while carrying an explosive package. Don't let him reach you or he'll blow up in your face!

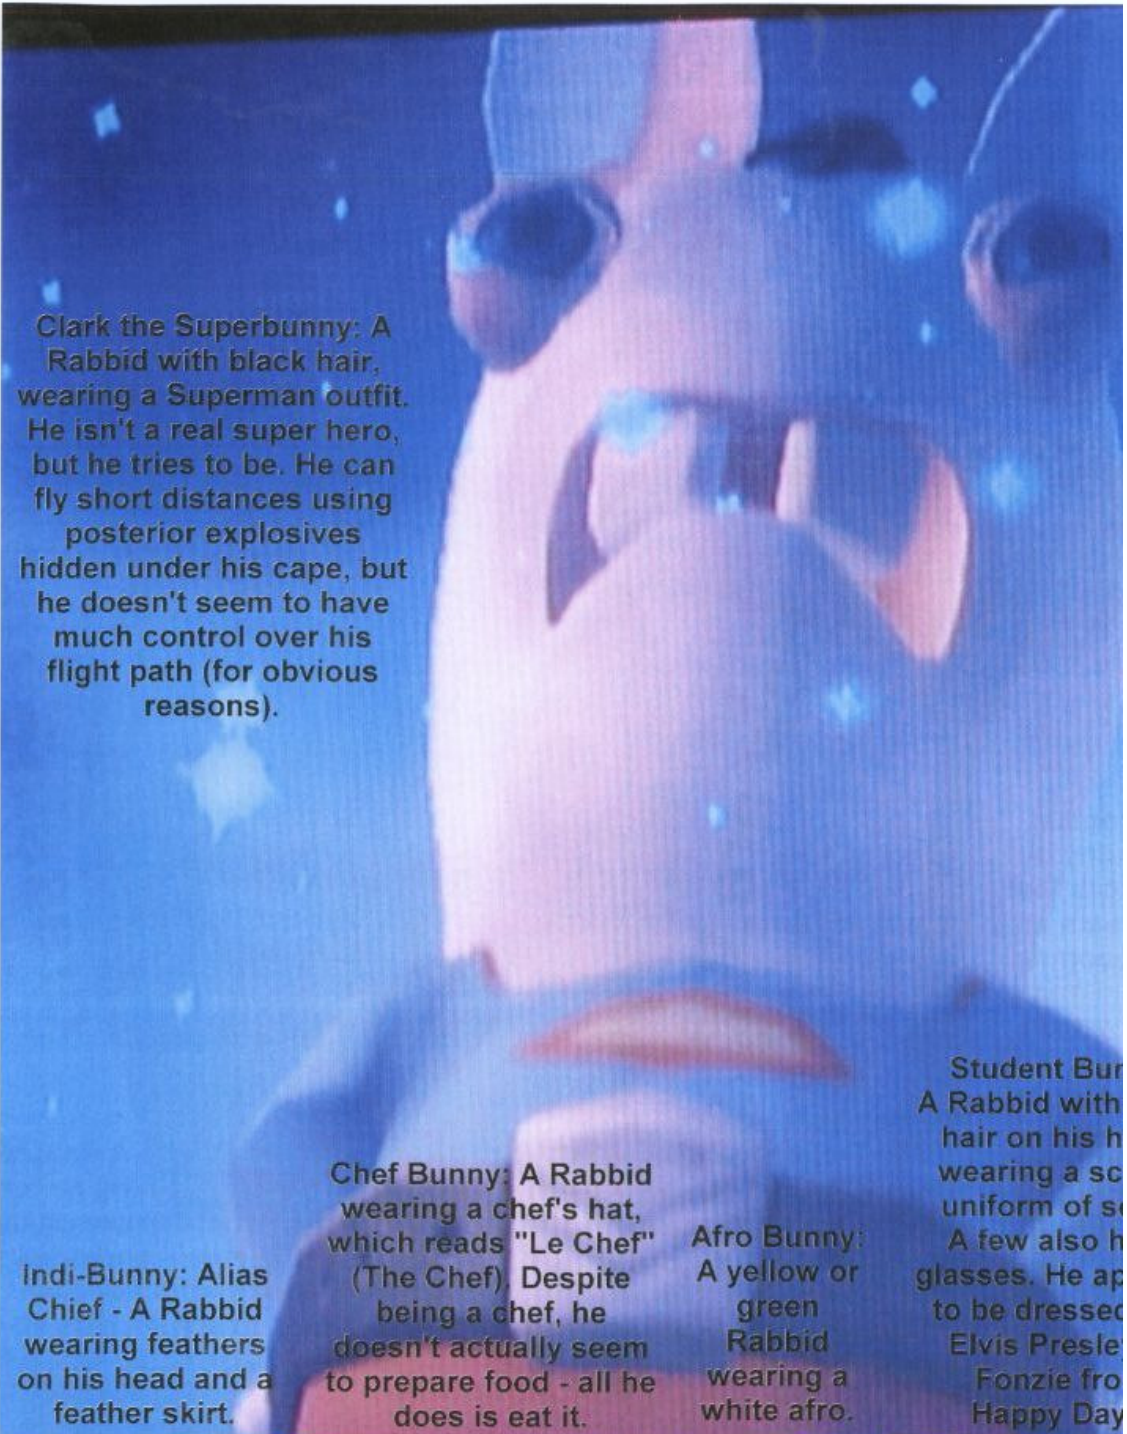

Miner Bunny: A Rabbid wearing a mining helmet with a metal spike on the top. Tunnels underneath the ground and then pops up somewhere else.

RAAAbbids!

Clark the Superbunny: A Rabbid with black hair, wearing a Superman outfit. He isn't a real super hero, but he tries to be. He can fly short distances using posterior explosives hidden under his cape, but he doesn't seem to have much control over his flight path (for obvious reasons).

Indi-Bunny: Alias Chief - A Rabbid wearing feathers on his head and a feather skirt.

Chef Bunny: A Rabbid wearing a chef's hat, which reads "Le Chef" (The Chef). Despite being a chef, he doesn't actually seem to prepare food - all he does is eat it.

Afro Bunny: A yellow or green Rabbid wearing a white afro.

Gladiator Bunny: A Rabbid wearing various metal kitchen utensils on his body to protect him from weapons. He attacks with a ladle. Moves slow, but can take many hits before he is taken down.

Pirate Bunny: A bunny dressed in typical pirate gear.

Mexican Bunny: A sombrero-wearing Rabbid that sleeps as much as he can. However this gives him a real disadvantage.

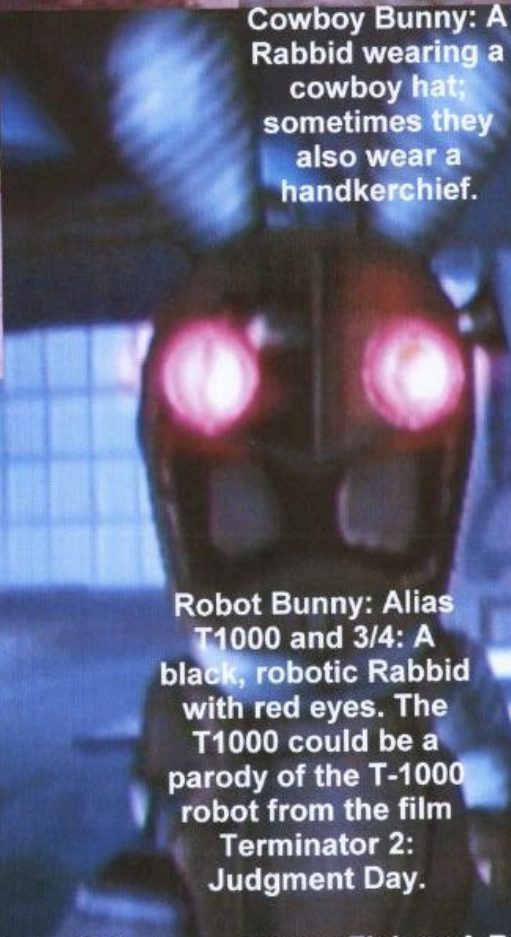

Cowboy Bunny: A Rabbid wearing a cowboy hat; sometimes they also wear a handkerchief.

UFO Bunny: Alias UFB (Unidentified Flying Bunny) is a good demonstration for the phenomenon of UFO. These bunnies are dressing like aliens when they are outside of their flying saucer and are trying to scare people.

Rocking Bun
A Rabbid wearing shades in d clothes, any of music v make them to uncontrolla

Robot Bunny: Alias T1000 and 3/4: A black, robotic Rabbid with red eyes. The T1000 could be a parody of the T-1000 robot from the film Terminator 2: Judgment Day.

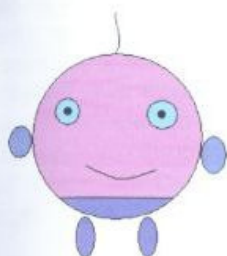

Pink: AKA T4III7773344303XX X: A robotic rabbit with large ears. It is protected by a forcefield at all times.

Bunny Fisher: A Rabbid wearing night vision goggles. He always drops down from a Rabbid UFO with a rope. He is a parody of Sam Fisher, the main character in Tom Clancy's Splinter Cell.

Jedi wear

From Star Wars universe. Jedi wear was the term given to the attire of members of both the Old and New Jedi Orders. Traditionally, The attire usually was made in shades of brown or sometimes black, with a utility belt for various purposes, but also as a place on which to clip a lightsaber. Boots, loose-fitting pants and a cloak typically accompanied the garment. As these garments were not usually elaborate, the outfit mirrored their attachment-free philosophy, as well as showing their requirement to live almost devoid of luxury and also their devotion to service. The apparel also allowed great freedom of movement. The rough material proved useful on survival missions, as it was strong enough to show some resistance to tearing and fraying, as well as putting the wearer through some discomfort to help sharpen their focus.

In an interview Dan Thorsland, editor of the Tales of the Jedi comic books argues that wearing armor is not consistent with the way of the Jedi:

"You won't see Jedi wearing a lot of armor, and there's a reason for that. So we make sure no one's running around looking like King Arthur from Excalibur. That's not the way of a Jedi."

—Dan Thorsland

Old Jedi Order

Traditional robes

A display of variations of the traditional Jedi robes.

Sworn to a life of modesty and humility, Jedi were raised their entire lives without possessions except for a lightsaber. Since they were given what they needed and their desires were controlled, most Jedi wore traditional yet simple Jedi robes, not feeling the need for fancy and outstanding outfits. The simplicity of the Jedi apparel was in many ways symbolic of the selfless compassion that characterized the Jedi order.

The variety in Jedi clothing 4,000 years prior to the Clone Wars

Jedi robes were simple and comfortable, long, flowing robes, including an overtunic, an undertunic, a cloak or outer robe with a hood, and sometimes a tabard, each of which generally varied in earth tones. (At least a few Jedi, though, wore robes that were deliberately rough spun and itched against the wearers skin. This was to learn to ignore distracting physical sensations. In effect, the wearing of such robes became an exercise in concentration) However, there were some Jedi that wore Jedi robes in other colors. Vandar Tokare and Zhar Lestin, for instance, would wear blue robes around the time of the Jedi Civil War, while their contemporary Vrook Lamar wore red robes. Four thousand years later, towards the fall of the Old Republic, Anakin Skywalker wore robes ranging from dark brown to black, with the tabard made of synthetic leather. As a rule, the left side of the dress was always turned on the right part of the torso.

Three Jedi in traditional Jedi robes.

The overtunic and tabard commonly had two symmetric pieces of cloth in the front hanging beneath and sewn at the waist, which stopped around the knees. However, as with Saesee Tiin, the overtunic was pleated. The overtunic could be shorter than knee-length or as long as ankle-length, of which the latter became common by the Rebellion era. Jedi garments further consisted of plain loose-fitting trousers and an obi. The obi matched in color with the overtunic. Jedi garb sometimes included an undershirt, and like the undertunic it often replaced, it generally contrasted in hue with the overtunic. The Jedi also wore leather utility belts, where they carried specialized field gear—such as food and tool pouches, a breather pouch, and energy and food capsules—and leather boots. By the time of the fall of the Old Republic, there was also a special black cloak of Jedi mastership. The Ho'Din Jedi Master Plett was known to wear one. Diplomatic Jedi commonly wore soft boots, while active agents dressed in sturdy field boots made of nerf hide that sometimes had ridged soles. Jedi clothing was very functional as the robes were thermo-sensitive, helping protect the wearer from the elements, and allowed for great maneuverability.

While the exact appearance of the Jedi robes varied from individual to individual and from era to era, the basic concept of simplicity and functionality was present up to the time of the Great Jedi Purge. However, during the days of the Mandalorian wars, the styles of Jedi robes were more varied and customized. For instance, Q'Anilia wore a purple robe with a ruffled sleeve hem and green hems along the bottom; Lucien Draz's were white and heavily layered with gold markings; and Xamar wore a royal blue robe tied at the waist by a wide brown belt and two white tabards draping down his back.

The latter part of the Old Sith Wars saw the emergence of a new type of robe, the Gray Jedi robe. The term Gray Jedi was used to describe a Force-sensitive individual who had completed Jedi training, yet operated independently and outside of the Jedi Council. It is unknown as to why a specific type of robe became associated with these Jedi, since the robes in and of themselves differed very little from traditional Jedi garb.

Since a time before memory to the Order's demise, the most ethical and commendable of Jedi Masters wore Ceremonial Jedi Robes. The Ceremonial Jedi Robe was a traditional brown robe with parts of the robe made of pure white cloth. The robe was only given to Jedi that gave everything to serve and protect the Galaxy, and would sometimes be rewarded after death.

Jessica Alba 100%

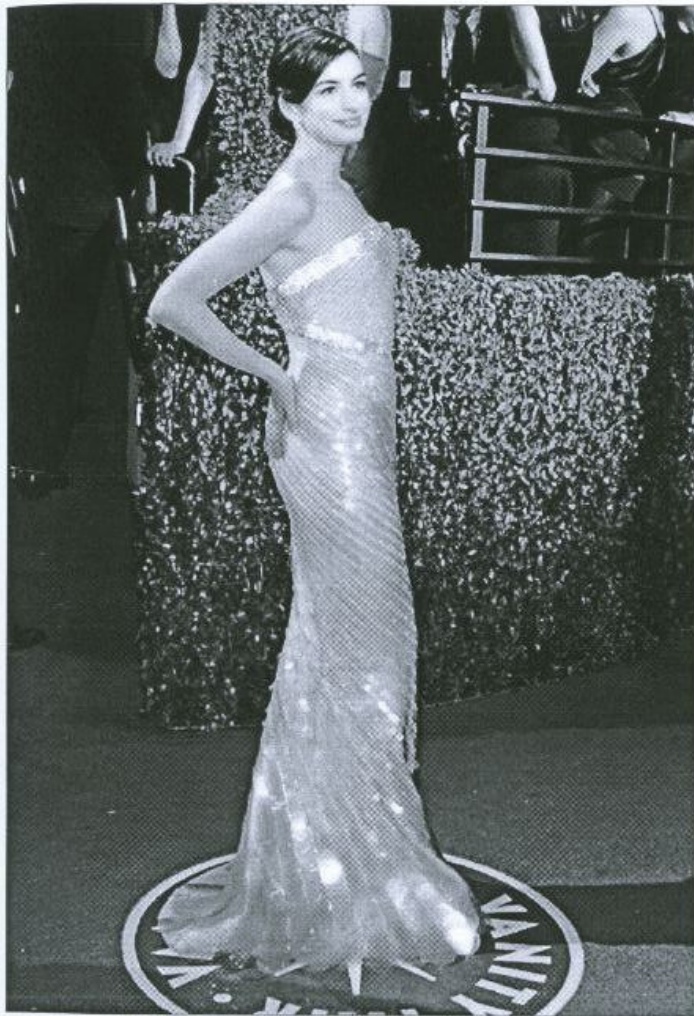

This young woman has a little baby. Her body is perfect and her dress is gorgeous. Black is an elegant colour because it is a favorite one already a very long time. The white stripe is glimpse gentleness. Her bag and add-ins are cute. Pumps are a good choose. Her outfit is for me very girl like.

Kate Winslett 95%

This is a british actress and this year is for Katete pretty good. I think this color isn't right for her (she looks in fat this dress). But for someone other it the dress would be the most beautiful on Academy Awards. The dress is in a antique style. This is the favorite style for the year "2009". Her hairdo is in a perfect style..

Anne Hathaway 98%

She is very interesting. She has big eyes and nature raspberry's lips.this model is perfect. I applaud. This dress is shiny silver. It's a hit in fashion. Simple style look magically. Only earrings are cute and take effect princess. Only one mistake – hair is as bad image. It looks like a romance.

Cotton

Cotton is a soft, staple fiber that grows in a form known as a boll around the seeds of the cotton plant (Gossypium sp.), a shrub native to tropical and subtropical regions around the world, including the Americas, India and Africa. The fiber most often is spun into yarn or thread and used to make a soft, breathable textile, which is the most widely used natural-fiber cloth in clothing today. The English name, which began to be used circa 1400, derives from the Arabic, meaning cotton.

History

Cotton was cultivated by the inhabitants of the Indus Valley Civilization by the 5th millennium BCE - 4th millennium BCE. The Indus cotton industry was well developed and some methods used in cotton spinning and fabrication continued to be used until the modern Industrialization of India. Well before the Common Era the use of cotton textiles had spread from India to the Mediterranean and beyond.

According to The Columbia Encyclopedia, Sixth Edition:

"Cotton has been spun, woven, and dyed since prehistoric times. It clothed the people of ancient India, Egypt, and China. Hundreds of years before the Christian era cotton textiles were woven in India with matchless skill, and their use spread to the Mediterranean countries. In the 1st cent. Arab traders brought fine muslin and calico to Italy and Spain. The Moors introduced the cultivation of cotton into Spain in the 9th cent. Fustians and dimities were woven there and in the 14th cent. in Venice and Milan, at first with a linen warp. Little cotton cloth was imported to England before the 15th cent., although small amounts were obtained chiefly for candlewicks. By the 17th cent. the East India Company was bringing rare fabrics from India. Native Americans skillfully spun and wove cotton into fine garments and dyed tapestries. Cotton fabrics found in Peruvian tombs are said to belong to a pre-Inca culture. In color and texture the ancient Peruvian and Mexican textiles resemble those found in Egyptian tombs."

The earliest cultivation of cotton discovered thus far in the Americas occurred in Mexico, some 5,000 years ago. The indigenous species was Gossypium hirsutum which is today the most widely planted species of cotton in the world, constituting about 90% of all production worldwide. The greatest diversity of wild cotton species is found in Mexico, followed by Australia and Africa.

In Peru, cultivation of the indigenous cotton species Gossypium barbadense was the backbone of the development of coastal cultures such as the Norte Chico, Moche and Nazca. Cotton was grown upriver, made into nets and traded with fishing villages along the coast for large supplies of fish. The Spanish who came to Mexico in the early 1500s found the people growing cotton and wearing clothing made of it.

PICKING COTTON IN GEORGIA

Mechanized harvesting

Most cotton in the United States, Europe, and Australia is harvested mechanically, either by a cotton picker, a machine that removes the cotton from the boll without damaging the cotton plant, or by a cotton stripper, which strips the entire boll off the plant. Cotton strippers are used in regions where it is too windy to grow picker varieties of cotton, and usually after application of a chemical defoliant or the natural defoliation that occurs after a freeze. Cotton is a perennial crop in the tropics and without defoliation or freezing, the plant will continue to grow.

The international cotton trade

The United States, with sales of $4.9 billion, and Africa, with sales of $2.1 billion, are the largest exporters of raw cotton. Total international trade is $12 billion. Africa's share of the cotton trade has doubled since 1980. Neither area has a significant domestic textile industry, textile manufacturing having moved to developing nations in Eastern and South Asia such as India and China. In Africa cotton is grown by numerous small holders. Dunavant Enterprises, based in Memphis, Tennessee, is the leading cotton broker in Africa with hundreds of purchasing agents. It operates cotton gins in Uganda, Mozambique, and Zambia. In Zambia it often offers loans for seed and expenses to the 180,000 small farmers who grow cotton for it, as well as advice on farming methods. Cargill also purchases cotton in Africa for export.

The 25,000 cotton growers in the United States are heavily subsidized at the rate of $2 billion per year. The future of these subsidies is uncertain and has led to anticipatory expansion of cotton brokers' operations in Africa. Dunavant expanded in Africa by buying out local operations. This is only possible in former British colonies and Mozambique; former French colonies continue to maintain tight monopolies, inherited from their former colonialist masters, on cotton purchases at low fixed prices.
